Fieldwork Project Management Overview
Katrina and its Aftermath

At every stage of any project, work with students to determine their interests and involve them in the decision making process.

Stage 1
Determine topic. (In this case the topic is Hurricane Katrina and its Aftermath.
Design logistics.
- When will the project start and end?
- What will the product be?
- Will students work individually or in groups?
- Who do you need to get permission from?
- Who do you need to invite to class?
- What handouts and resources do you need?

Stage 2
Begin fieldwork.
Begin writing activities.
Practice with as many classroom activities as possible. Have students interview each other and bring in others to assist the students in learning how to interview.
Be very specific about the product you expect from the students. Let them know ahead of time how they will be graded.
Develop products and presentations.

Stage 3
Evaluate the project.
- What were the strengths of the project?
- What were the weaknesses?
- What worked?
- What didn’t work?
- Would you do the project again? If so, what would you do differently?
Date:

Dear Parents and Caregivers,

Our class will be studying the effects of this year's hurricanes during the next few weeks. Students will conduct primary source research by interviewing people at school, at home, and/or in the community. They will also be learning to ask good questions, listen well, take notes, follow-up on interesting points or missing information, follow directions and a sequence, and behave politely. Students may want to interview you, another family member, or a community member. They must get permission of those they interview to share the results. Finally, they will compile their research and develop a final product and be graded on both.

Students will be interviewing each other, then someone in your family or community about their experience with the hurricane. They are to ask questions, and record the answers. They will bring the info back to class. To prepare for this task, they will interview about a more familiar topic - their name. So, please tell your child the story of how they were given their name.

Please contact me with any questions you may have about this project.

Thank you,

(Teacher's name)

Sample Fieldnotes: Teen Memories of Grade School Traditions

By Maida Owens, Louisiana Folklife Program

These fieldnotes and interview transcript are provided for teachers and students as an example of how one folklorist took a research idea and developed it. These notes show how serendipitous fieldwork can be. It is difficult to predict exactly how a field project will develop, where ideas will come from, who will cooperate, and who won’t.

Teachers should note that fieldnotes are highly personal and vary among researchers. This format is similar to journaling and uses two-column, steno pad format.

FRIDAY, JULY 23, 1999

I asked 17-year-old Rachel about being interviewed about paper folding. She seemed a bit shy about it, but agreed to be interviewed. She immediately folded a fortuneteller, but I said that I didn’t have the tape recorder at home to do the formal interview, so we couldn’t do it right now. I told her the type of things that I would ask her.

At what age did she do this type of paperfolding?

Why did she do it? In what types of situations did she do it?

Why did she stop doing it?

Suddenly a paper airplane whizzed by. Rachel’s 19-year-old brother had overheard our conversation, made a paper airplane, and shot it at me. I asked him if he would agree to be interviewed, and he said, “No way. Absolutely not.” I asked why, and he said that he didn’t want to be on the Internet. So I asked if I could include a photo of his airplane in the project, and he said that would not be a problem.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 26, 1999

Rachel and I decided to set up the interview for Saturday, September 4, since both of us were free in the afternoon. Also, the weather was expected to be good, so we could do the photographs outside. Rachel’s grandmother overheard us and asked what we were doing. After we explained, she said that when she was little, she always made a paper hat. She asked for a piece of newspaper - it had to be made out of newspaper, not any other type of paper - and quickly folded a hat. I asked if we could photograph her making a hat, and she said, “Certainly,” but she would not be in town on the 4th. She said that it looks a lot like a boat also. They called it both.

NOTES

Remember to discuss with her the next time she is in town. I wonder if she would be willing to be interviewed or have photographs put on the Internet. I wonder if she used the funny papers to give it color.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1999

This would be a good day for doing the interview, but not the photographs because it was raining. So we decided to go ahead with the interview and wait on the photographs. We were alone in the house, and we didn’t expect anyone.

I set up the tape recorder and tested the sound level. I listened for any sounds. No appliances were running (except the refrigerator, which was quiet). The TV and radio were off. No fans were running. The air conditioner didn’t seem to be a problem.

I told Rachel that I was ready. So we sat down, but as we did I realized that our kitchen chairs squeaked loudly, so we switched chairs. I wanted the clearest recording possible even if it wouldn’t be used online. Transcribing over background noises is very annoying. I knew that it was worth the extra effort just to make transcribing easier.

NOTES

Even though we have a special transcribing machine at work, I will use the recorder and do it at home. This is a short interview and not worth the effort needed to set up the special equipment.

Transcript of Interview

Louisiana folklorist Maida Owens interviewed her daughter, Rachel Bergeron, on Saturday, September 4, 1999, at their home in Baton Rouge about making paper objects.

Maida: I remember you making items out of paper, one in particular where you would tell a fortune. Do you remember doing that?

Rachel: It was in grade school that I would do that. It was a pretty popular thing to do. You would fold the paper to where you would move it with your fingers. . . . It was made so that you would have four parts to it on the top that would have different colors. And you would ask someone to pick a color. And then you would spell out the color and move back and forth the little piece of paper and whatever. . . . Inside would be numbers, and whichever ones you would land on, you would then ask the person to pick a number. Then you would fold up the paper and underneath that would be the fortune. And then you would tell them the fortune. [The fortune] would be something that we [had made] up.

Notes: It would be good to have a photo of Rachel holding the paper item showing names of colors on the outside.

Maida: What kind of fortunes would be there?

Rachel: Things about your future or your personality. One might be “You will be very rich,” or “You are nice.” Many different things would be written on them.

Notes: Get a close-up photo of paper item showing numbers and one fortune.

Maida: Kind of like Chinese fortune cookies?

Rachel: Yes, a lot like that, but not so mysterious. A little more, child-like.

Maida: You said, “We would do this.” Who is ‘we’? What age were you?

Rachel: Mainly kindergarten through 4th-grade students would do that. And it was mainly girls who would do that.

Maida: Would the boys have anything to do with it?

Rachel: Not usually. I think some boys did, but I don’t remember many of them.

Maida: But it was mainly a girl-thing. What kind of paper would you use? Was it special?

Rachel: It was just regular writing paper that you would use, and you would have to cut it off to make it into a square, so that you could do it right.

Note: Remember to get a photo of Rachel making first fold.

Maida: How did you learn how to do it?

Rachel: From other kids my age.

Maida: Did you formally have to ask them? Or did you just watch them and figure it out? Was there a class?

Rachel: No, it was just something that I just picked up. From seeing other people, or someone might have shown me it. A lot of people did it all the time, so, you know, it wasn’t that hard.

Maida: What do you mean by that, "Some people would do it all the time?"

Rachel: People would make lots of them.

Maida: They were really into the fortunetelling? Or making them?

Rachel: It was fun to make, and it was fun to play with during class.

Maida: During class?

Rachel: Uh-huh.

Maida: So it was something you weren’t supposed to be doing?

Rachel: Probably not.

Maida: Which probably made it even more fun?

Rachel: Maybe.

Maida: Well, if it was so much fun, why did you stop doing it?

Rachel: It was just kind of one of those phases. I don’t know why I stopped.

Maida: So you out grew it?

Rachel: Yes, I think it was just something that you out grow.

Maida: Girls folded this kind of paper. Were there other things that you remember? Or did boys fold other types of things?

Rachel: Yes, I remember people making paper airplanes and spit balls and stuff. Usually that was more of a boy-thing, but girls did do it, but not as much.

Maida: What were the airplanes like?
Rachel: There were lots of different types of airplanes. Some would be the ones you would typically see, long and coming to a point. And then others would be all sorts of crazy-looking things.

Maida: More elaborate?

Rachel: Yes.

Maida: The more elaborate ones, were they the sort of thing they would learn in classes or part of science class?

Rachel: No. No.

Maida: So they just taught each other?

Rachel: I think so, yeah.

Maida: And what about the spit balls? It seems like a spit ball is just a wad of paper.

Rachel: Yeah.

Maida: They aren’t more elaborate than that?

Rachel: No

Maida: Did girls do the paper airplanes much?

Rachel: Yes, I’m sure. I don’t really remember.

Maida: Right now you are 17, and you are thinking back to when you were?

Rachel: Ten.

Maida: Let’s go through how you do the fortune telling. Pretend that I am another child. And how would you do this?

Rachel: Okay. Pick a color.

Note: Get a close-up showing the names of colors on the outside.

Maida: Red.

Rachel: [Moves the paper each time a letter is said.] R - E - D. Pick a number.

Maida: Six.

Rachel: [Moves the paper each time a number is said.] One, two, three, four, five, six. Pick another number.

Maida: Two.

Rachel: [Lifts up the paper flap to reveal a written fortune.] The fortune is that you will marry a frog.

Note: Get a close-up showing numbers with one side raised to show the fortune.

Maida: Thanks for sharing this with me today.

My fortune caught me off guard. Since we knew each other so well and we had kind of rehearsed the interview, I thought I knew how it would go, but she surprised me. I wish I had kept the recorder going to capture our laughing and teasing after the interview.

Finally, I asked Rachel to sign a release form, which I also signed as her parent/guardian since she was under 18.
Taking Notes / Making Conclusions Worksheet

Walk around a neighborhood and observe the outsides of homes and gardening styles. Write notes about your observations in the Taking Notes column. Later, think about your notes and write some conclusions you can make about what you saw in the Making Conclusions column. Explain them to the class.

How Not to Conduct an Interview

Reporter: Hey. Hey you....

Guest: Who, me?

Reporter: Yeah, you... come here. I have to ask you some questions. Get over here.

Guest: Yes, what would you like to know?

Reporter: What's your name?

Guest: Gary.

Reporter: What?

Guest: Gary.

Reporter: Really? Gary? I hate that name. Hey... where are you from?

Guest: Shreveport.

Reporter: Are you married?

Guest: No.

Reporter: What's your wife's name?

Guest: I said I'm NOT married.

Reporter: Oh. Are you here on vacation?

Guest: Yes.
Reporter: Where are you from?

Guest: As I said, I'm from Shreveport.

Reporter: Shreveport . . . that's where they have the Jazz Festival.

Guest: No, that's New Orleans. I'm from Shreveport.

Reporter: Is your wife from New Orleans?

Guest: Shreveport, ... and no, I'm not married.

Reporter: Don't blame me. So, what have you seen so far in Baton Rouge?

Guest: So far I've seen the State Capitol and the Governor's Mansion.

Reporter: I think the State Capitol is stupid. It's a big waste of money. It's just like this giant candy box, so it's supposed to be totally awesome or something. AS IF. You should see the Governor's Mansion instead.

Guest: Well, as I said, I HAVE seen the Governor's Mansion.

Reporter: Cool. Are you going to see Mount Rushmore?

Guest: Well, I might some day, but Mount Rushmore isn't in Louisiana.

Reporter: Whatever. Okay, I'm done, you can go.
The Reluctant Guest

Reporter: Do you like teaching?

Guest: Yes.

Reporter: What do you like most about teaching?

Guest: Students.

Reporter: What was your worst experience as a teacher?

Guest: The fire.

Reporter: How long have you been teaching?

Guest: A long time.

Reporter: Do you keep in touch with any of your students?

Guest: The astronaut and the zydeco musician who won a Grammy Award.

Reporter: Well, thanks for your time.

Guest: Sure.

Fact-Based, Open-Ended, and Follow-Up Questions Worksheet

Name ________________________________   Date __________________________

PART 1: Classifying Questions
Label each question below in the blank provided. For Fact-Based questions, write "FB;" for Open-Ended questions, write "OE;" and for Follow-Up questions, write "FQ."

Definitions
Fact-Based Question: calls for single facts as responses
Open-Ended Question: asks the interviewees to explain details in their response
Follow-up Question: questions that arise during the interview

_____1. What is a typical morning like for you?
_____2. When were you born?
_____3. You said earlier that you were named after your aunt and that you like her very much. Can you tell me more about why you like her so much?
_____4. Would you tell me about your memories of sitting on a porch with your grandmother?
_____5. What is your address and phone number?

PART 2: Listening for Follow-Up Questions
For each statement below, write two Follow-up questions in the spaces provided. Write "FB" next to Fact-Based questions and "OE" next to Open-Ended questions.

1. I was named after my Uncle George.
   FQ#1: ______________________________________________________________
   FQ#2: ______________________________________________________________

2. My favorite food is gumbo.

INTERVIEW CHECKLIST

Name ___________________________________________ Date ____________________

BEFORE YOU LEAVE

____ Choose a person to interview and make an appointment with him or her at a quiet place.
____ Make sure all supplies and forms are in your Interview Folder and you have the equipment you need.
____ Practice using the tape recorder, camera, or other equipment.
____ Prepare a list of questions to guide the interview. If you use the prepared question bank, make sure you ask two or three questions of your own.
____ Beforehand, write in your journal about things that may affect the interview.

DURING THE INTERVIEW

____ Locate a quiet place to setup, and if you are using a recorder test it out.
____ Begin by recording the biographical data. Explain to your Interviewee exactly what will be taking place and have him or her read the Oral Permission Form into the recorder.
____ Start with general, biographical information and narrow to specific questions.
____ Pause early in the interview to check your tape recorder.
____ Do more listening than talking.
____ Take necessary notes in your Journal. Ask for clarification of special language and terms.
____ Take pictures of the Interviewee.
____ Have Interviewee sign a Written Permission Form.

AFTER INTERVIEW

____ Write follow-up field notes about your impressions, ideas, and questions you still need to ask.
____ Label your tapes. Complete your Tape Log and/or Photo/Slide Log.
____ Start transcribing as soon as possible.
____ Analyze your findings to identify the important points. Decide if any follow-up is needed.
____ Send your Interviewee a thank-you note.

TASKS

- At the interview, introduce yourself and the group.
- Before you begin the interview, read the Oral Release Form into the tape recorder.
- Coordinate with the tape operator to perform a "sound test."
- You will ask most of the questions, but be courteous and allow others to ask questions also.
- At the end of the interview, ask Interviewee to sign the Written Release Form.
- During the interview, take notes on key words and ideas.
- After the interview, thank the interviewee.

CHECKLIST: Did you:

- Organize your materials in advance?
- Introduce yourself and all the members of the group to the Interviewee?
- Begin the interview by reading the Oral Release Form into the tape recorder?
- Stop the interview so that the tape operator could test the tape recorder, making sure that the Interviewee could be heard and that the equipment is working properly?
- Lead the interview by asking most of the questions, but allowing all group members to participate?
- Take notes by writing down key words and phrases, making sure that you spelled special terms and names correctly?
- Have the Interviewee sign the Written Release Form at the end of the interview?
- Thank the Interviewee for his/her time?
- Conduct the interview in an ethical, courteous, and respectful manner?
- File every piece of paper from this Interview in the Archive Folder?
- Write and send the Interviewee a thank-you note?

MATERIALS AND EQUIPMENT

- Journal paper and clipboard, Notetaking Forms, or laptop computer
- Pens and pencils
- The list of questions generated by your group
- Folklife Interview Form, Written Release Form, Oral Release Form
- Stationery for thank-you note.

TASKS

• Set the index marker to ZERO.
• Check the tape recorder. If possible, use an external microphone and headphones.
• Position the microphone near the Interviewee for the best sound.
• Pause to check the sound level and the equipment at least once.
• Change the tape when it is finished.
• Label the tapes with names, date, and setting.
• Observe the battery power.
• During the interview and while the tape is running, fill out a Tape Log.

CHECKLIST: Did you:

_____ Bring extra batteries and tapes?
_____ Place FRESH batteries in the tape recorder?
_____ Test the machine in advance to ensure that it is working properly?
_____ Place the microphone close to the Interviewee? (If possible, use a microphone that plugs into the machine, rather than a built-in one.)
_____ Set the counter to ZERO?
_____ Pause the tape to test the recorder after the Oral Release Form was read, ensuring that you can hear the Interviewee and that the equipment is working properly?
_____ If headphones are available, did you listen to the entire interview through headphones so that you could continually check the sound?
_____ Fill out a Tape Log, listing key subjects, and match the subjects with the tape counter?
_____ Monitor the tape so that you can change it when it is finished?
_____ Monitor the battery power?
_____ Label the tape with names, date, and setting of the interview? See the sample below?

TASKS

• Your task is to "map the space." Answer these questions to help you visualize:
  • What and where is this place?
  • What is it used for?
  • How big is it?
  • What grabs your attention?
  • How are the streets laid out? What do the houses look like?
  • What kinds of things do you see?
  • Are there a lot of trees and flowers?
  • How do people use the space?
  • What does their appearance indicate about the space?
  • What activities do you see?
  • Do any overall themes emerge?
  • Draw a diagram of the space being observed. Sketch rooms, objects, streets, houses, plants and flowers, material culture, people, cars—anything that provides a sense of place.

CHECKLIST: Did you:

_____ Gather paper, pencils, and pens in advance?
_____ Thoroughly observe the setting to decide what should be drawn?
_____ Draw an overall sketch of the space where the interview has taken place: the rooms, objects, streets, houses, foliage, objects, people, cars, bikes, animals, etc.?
_____ Do drawings that provide an overall "feel" for the place?
_____ Include the people and their appearance in your drawings?

MATERIALS AND EQUIPMENT

_____ Sketchpad
_____ Pencils, color pencils, or charcoals
_____ Tape measure

Transcribing an Interview Worksheet

Name ___________________________________ Date ________________________

Instructions: Select a short portion of a tape to transcribe in the text box below, or on notebook paper. Before starting, write the number on the tape counter at the beginning point. Transcribe until you fill all the lines in the text box. When you have finished filling up the text box, write the ending number on the tape counter. Here are some points to remember:

1. Write down each word you hear. Stop the tape when needed, rewind occasionally and listen to the same section as you read along, making sure you wrote the words in the correct order. You may need to do this several times. If you can’t understand the words, ask another person to listen or simply leave a blank space.
2. Each time a new speaker talks, use their full name and then initials so readers can follow along. Maria Hernandez would be MH, etc.
3. People talk much differently than they write. They begin new sentences without finishing the old one. They may add a lot of extra words (called “crutch words”) such as “you know” and “yeah.” If you think the words are crutch words and you want to leave these out of your transcript, say so at the beginning. “I removed crutch words and false starts from this transcript.” Also say whether you are including all the “uhhs” and “ums” and “ahs.”

Some hints:
- Sometimes sentences aren’t complete. That’s okay. Just write what you hear. When a sentence is not complete, put a dash at the end (-).
- To add your own comment or explain something that the interviewee didn’t fully say, put brackets [ ] around your words. For example, “I learned how to do it [to crochet] when I was nine years old.”
- Don’t try to make your transcript sound better by adding your own words or correcting grammar.
- Use standard spelling and don’t try to write in dialect or “how it sounds.” In other words, write “that” instead of “dat,” even if “dat” is what you hear.
- Sometimes it’s not easy to see where one sentence ends and another begins. Just write it the best way you can. The main idea is that the transcript is accurate and comes close to how the speaker really sounds.
- If you can’t hear the words, leave a blank and come back to it later or have someone else listen to the tape. If you still can’t figure it out, use ellipses . . . three spaced dots . . . to represent something left out.
- If you want to emphasize a word, use italics.
Here's a sample transcript:

Anna Hernandez: Aunt Maria, well, I was wondering what kinds of vegetables you use in your chicken soup?
Maria Hernandez: I like to use celery, parsnips and carrots mostly, but I always use, see, like these here. I always use carrots. If we have potatoes, of course I throw those in. [Tastes the soup].
AH: How do you cut up the vege—
MH: --Carrots—I always put carrots in, you know, in thick slices, but it doesn’t much matter how I do the potatoes. No special way, really.
You’ll find that transcribing a tape is an art in itself. No two people will transcribe the same tape the same way.

Writing About an Interview Worksheet

Name ___________________________________  Date ________________________

Instructions: Answer these three questions about your interview to help you understand how the interview affected you.

1. What surprised you?

2. What interested you most?

3. What stirred or disturbed you?

Preparing a Presentation Worksheet

Name ___________________________________________ Date _____________________

I: Preparation

1. Before you begin, review the materials you've gathered.
   ___ Which photographs are most relevant?
   ___ What words of the Interviewee are most important?
   ___ What conclusions have you drawn?
   ___ What has been revealed in the illustrations and mapping of the space?

2. Create a Thesis Statement to guide your presentation. What is the "heart of the story"? When you think about the interview, what seems to be most important? Here is an example:
   The heart of our Interviewee’s story was that she was helping to keep her family name alive by managing the family business.

   Write your Thesis Statement: What is "the heart" of your Interviewee’s story?
   ______________________________________________________________
   ______________________________________________________________
   ______________________________________________________________

3. Write three Main Points that support your Thesis Statement.
   ______________________________________________________________
   ______________________________________________________________
   ______________________________________________________________

II: Putting The Presentation Together

1. General Guidelines for Presentation
   ___ Try to have at least one thing to hold up and pass around.
   ___ If teams are presenting make sure all group members participate in the development of the presentation.
   ___ Use as many materials as you can. (tapes/transcripts; photographs; illustrations and maps; fieldnotes).
   ___ Make use of the Interviewee’s direct words at least once.

2. Slides: Use large text and clear photographs. They should contain:
   ___ Create a title for the presentation.
   ___ Give the name of Interviewee (and position if appropriate, date and location of interview.)
   ___ Make sure you present your Thesis Statement: The "heart of the story" plus background information about fieldwork that helps audience to understand it.
   ___ State your three main points.
   ___ Tell what you learned from this interview.
   ___ Assert your conclusions: You and/or our group members’ reactions: What surprised you? What interested you? What stirred or disturbed you? (Handout 24)

III: The Presentation

   ___ 1. One student should introduce the group members.
   ___ 2. Each student should speak during the presentation.
   ___ 3. Each student should speak clearly, and help the audience understand the value of the project.
